Copying from Published Resources

Copyright law means that unless you have direct permission or the use is covered under one of the statutory exceptions to copyright, you need to seek permission to re-use published material.

This institution holds a Scottish Vocational FE Trial Licence which grants limited re-use rights, in addition to statutory exceptions, without the need to seek permission from rightsholders.

The permissions granted by the Scottish Vocational FE Trial Licence are different from the CLA Education Licence. While you can still photocopy, retype, scan or digitally re-use up to 5% or one chapter/article from CLA repertoire material (check if it’s covered at cla.co.uk), copies can only be made on an ad hoc basis — for informal, one-off use at the time they are needed.

You can…

- Make paper or digital copies for educational, teaching and also internal administrative purposes in your institution
- Make such copies for one-time use for your students, or for internal meetings or information, at the time – within one day - of that use
- Email such copies to individual students or staff
- Make accessible copies for students or staff with print disabilities

For everything else you need to clear permission. This includes:

- Making multiple paper copies of a resource you planned in advance to use as part of teaching your course
- Making copies available on a VLE or intranet for students on a course
- Other systematic, centralised, or advance copying
- Storing and re-issuing copies previously made under the ad hoc permissions of this Licence

If you would like to clear permission for any of the above, talk to your Licence Co-ordinator.

Note that if you are copying for HE-in-FE students (courses SCQF Level 8 and above) then these students continue to be covered by the CLA Education Licence, which covers you to store copies for those students on an intranet or VLE.
